MELBOURNE TO DEVONPORT YACHT RACE

In 1907 Thomas Fleming Day, editor of the American magazine "Rudder", wrote to his friend, T.A. Dickson, Commodore of the Royal Geelong Yacht Club, suggesting a new race across Bass Strait to Tasmania. Day struck a trophy valued at 60 guineas, a fortune at the time, as a prize for the winner.

112 years later, the trophy is valued around $100,000 and yachts are still racing across Bass Strait for the honour of winning the Rudder Cup. The race is the fifth oldest ocean race in the world, predating the Fastnet by 18 years.

The first race was won by Edgar Newland, sailing a 14.6m yawl Thistle, in conditions which were reported to be very difficult – so much so that his wife, who sailed in the race, appropriated the trophy, refusing to relinquish the Rudder Cup in a bid to "dissuade other yachtsmen from attempting such a dangerous race". The race continued using alternative trophies including the Doc Bennel Perpetual Trophy funded by the Royal St Kilda Yacht Club.

In 1968, the Rudder Cup again came to light and was presented to the Cruising Yacht Club of Victoria, now known as the ORCV, by Edgar Newland's son. The Rudder Cup Perpetual Trophy is awarded to the measurement handicap winner of the race across Bass strait to Northern Tasmania – typically Devonport or Low Head at the mouth of the Tamar River.

The 195nm Melbourne to Devonport race forms part of the ORCV Offshore Championship and is open to yachts racing fully crewed, "autohelm plus 4" or Double Handed.

This is a Category 2 event, as amended by the ORCV Special Regulations which allows for use of Satellite Phone in lieu of HF radios by suitably equipped yachts.
